An exciting opportunity to preserve the nation's digital heritage!

National Library of Scotland is seeking a dedicated information or digital technology professional with excellent digital preservation skills and experience to help preserve the nation's digital heritage for future generations. You will play a key role in the on-going development of the Library's digital preservation environment, policy, and strategies, and in ensuring that the digital content that we create and collect today remains understandable and accessible in the future. The Digital Preservation Officer will be a key member of the Digital Assets Team, and will work with NLS staff and partners, and the digital preservation community across the UK and beyond.

Closing date for completed applications: Monday 13th May 2013
