We will know records management is successful when....

.....we can roll out a cloud suite and say to our end-users:

- SharePoint
- Email
- Teams channels
- Teams Chat
- Yammer communities
- OneDrive for Business

- Gmail
- Chat
- Docs
- Hangouts
- Drive

Widely regarded as manageable

Widely regarded as unmanageable

Always treated as a record system	Usually treated as a record system	Sometimes treated as a record system	Rarely treated as a record system
Corporate document management systems	Large corporate databases  Line of business systems  Collaboration systems	Email systems  Filesharing applications (One Drive for Business, My Drive)	Chat systems

Shared spaces

Individual-centric spaces

RECORD SYSTEM TRADE-OFFS

MANAGEABILITY

The structure of the system supports the precise application of retention and access rules

USEABILITY

The structure of the application fits with the way the end-user wants to work

RELIABILITY

The application capture record routinely and comprehensively

Yammer communities	OneDrive for Business

Retention policies (to set defaults) and
Retention labels (to identify exceptions)

Rules to adjudicate which label or policy takes precedence

Electronic document and records management systems were intended to serve as the single record systems of an organisation

An email system is an automated filing system that automatically files correspondence into a very simple (too simple!) structure
